HONGKONG, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1889.

THE record of the year 1889 so far, show it to have been a year unparalleled for its succession of disasters, as well as of being ance. Storms, floods and other fearful calamities have followed one another with of the globe, and it would seem as if we had not seen the last of these dire afflictions, for the hurricane reported by telegram in the Irish Channel has caused terrible havor to life and property. This colony has much to be thankful for, that it has escaped the disasters which have overtaken neighborng places, with so little damage. The torrential rains of May last seemed to us at the time to have been an almost over- be very far from the truth after all.

whelming visitation, but really in comparison to what other places have suffered, and continue to suffer, our experience of the unprecedented atmospheric disturbances is altogether a minor one. It would appear, however, that the good fortune we have enjoyed of escaping serious typhoons for the past fifteen years, was likely last week to have been interrupted, as a study of the question seems to indicate that two typhoons were passing at the same time at no remote distance from us, or else that a typhoon of extraordinary area and radius was splittinto two parts by the mountainous ranges of Formosa; one part passing to the northward and the other to the southward of the island. From a most interesting chart which has been sent to us by an experienced officer of the Imperial Maritime

Customs' staff, who has already been instrumental in giving valuable storm-warnings and information to mariners, we see that on the 14th inst. the revolving storm met by the steamers Canton and Kutsang off the Tae islands, had crossed in a westerly direction from the Pacific, and the coast n the vicinity of Wenchow experienced ts outer edge. The centre of the storm which we felt on the night of the 15th and morning of the i6th instant; passed about sixty miles to the eastward of the Colony. travelling in a north-westerly direction and

Vice-President of the Colonial Board: giving Canton likewise a berth of the same distance. We experienced its outer vortex only,"but it must have raged with considerable violence in the neighborhood of Chelang Point and in the districts it traversed to the eastward of Canton. The steamer Amoy on the 16th, between Breaker Point and Pedro Blanco, also came in for a share of its violence. With the exception of the loss of the rudder of the steamer Whampoa we have not heard of any serious shipping casualty. With the setting in of the northeast monsoon we may reasonably expect to enjoy an immunity from further severe storms for at least another season.

IT will be remembered by many of our readers who take an interest in Chinese news and politics that, when His Majesty Kuang Hail married his Consort last spring in accordance with general usage he issued an Act of Grace, for the commutation of the sentences of all condemned criminals in the Empire in accordance with the various degrees and heinousness of their crimes. In accordance with this Act therefore, and as the time-Autumn Sessions-for sentencing the criminals has arrived, the Emperor has appointed by a recent decree certain high officers at the capital to look over the various cases filed at the Board of Punishments and give lighter sentences in each according to their several degrees. The following are the names of the officers :-- Ngeh-La-Ho-Pu, Grand Secretary, Li Hung Tsao, President of the Board of Rites, Sung kuel, Senior Vice-President of the Board of Civil Appointments Shu Ch'ang, Senior Vice-President, and Ch'ung Li and Marquis Tseng Chetach. the proposed Peking-Hankow railway fails to become a fail accompli, there will not be wanting apologists amongst the Chinese to try to explain away the "hitch." Here is a specimen which has been going the rounds lately in Tientsin :- "Rumours are rife, at the present moment, that the proposed railway between Lu-Kou Ch'iao and Hankow will not be undertaken, for the present at least. This is owing to the serious squabbles amongst the two principal Syndicates tendering for the work, composed, of two rival factions-Englishmen and French men! These merchants have each put in their claims in such a forcible manner and in such strong language to Li Chung-t'ang that H Excellency has lately been frequently seen throwing up his hands in weariness and utter despair in his end avours to reconcile the ferocious representatives of these two Syndicates. INSPECTOR LEE, inspector of Brothels, charged the proprietress of the Foon Fa brothel. Tai-pingshan, this morning at the Police Court with having as an immate a mere child of thirteen years age. The defence was that the little girl was not an inmate, but had just called the brothel in question last night in search of her mother, who was a servant in the establishment for some money to buy the customary candles and incense for " Joss" on the first and fifteenth days of each month—to-day being the first of the tenth moon—when she was espied by a zealous district watchman in plain clothes, and arrested together with the defendant herself. THE V. R. C. REGATTA.

A well-attended meeting of the rowing men. connected with the Victoria Recreation Club was held in the Gymnasium last evening, for the purpose of deciding on the arrangements for the Regatta.-Mr. J., F. Holliday presided.

Mr. G. C. Master, (hon, secretary) stated that the Regatta was held last year on the 13th and 14th December, but they proposed to hold it this year on the 19th and 20th December. The reason of this was that the oars which had been ordered had not yet arrived owing to the strike at the Docks at home. He expected them about the middle of next month. It was proposed to commence training on the 7th November, which would give them six weeks, and this he thought was quite sufficient. They would meet on the 6th November to pick crews for the Chairman's Cup and, in order to give every one a chance, it was proposed that if there, were a large number of entries for this race those who were not picked in this race should be given the first chance in the races for the German and American Cups, those who had been already picked in the Chairman's Cup not being allowed to row in these races unless there were some blanks, in which case the crews of the Chairman's Cup would draw for the vacant places. In case of there not being too large a number of entries to allow all to row in the Chairman's Cup, this proposal would of course fall through. In the case of any member of a crew being prevented from continuing training, it was proposed that the Committee should have the power of appointing another, member to fill his place. Some unpleasantness occurred in a similar case last year, and it was thought that this would be obviated by allowing the Committee this power. | well that this meant that her life was at stake, | Spain has long suffered. The first was son of They would be best informed of the form of the rowing members and would be therefore best able to appoint the fairest substitute. To obviate anything like the recurrence of the Mayblbssom trouble of last year, it was proposed to make a new rule, applicable to the forthcoming Regatta only, namely, that the International, Chairman's Cup, Members' Cup, German Cup, and American Cup must be rowed in club boats. Other races. such as the Ladies' Purse and Garrison Cup. could be rowed in club boats or boats of similar build approved of by the Committee. Hitherto the International had always been a mile race, but as this was one of the most important races of the regatta, it was proposed to make it a mile and a half. Many mem bers who took very little trouble in training were able to row for a mile, and it was though that some difference should be made between these and other members who made some sacrifice and went in for thorough training. The Chairman's and Members' Cups were a mile and a half and the International was quite as important as these. If it was thought that three races of a mile and a half were too much the Members' Cup might be reduced to one mile. Mr. Duer moved the adoption of the Com mittee's proposition.

Mr. Duncan seconded, and an amendmen having failed, the motion was carried. The date of the Regatta was fixed for the 19th and 20th December. Arace for members under 20 having been added, the proceedings terminated

This was found out to be the case, when the next morning several rustics entered the melon patch and saw a number of melons cut and neatly laid together ready to be carried off as soon as the thief had finished his job, when grim death, in the shape of a tiger, cut short his career. The remains of the thief was found lying about three hundred yards from the scene of his fatal depredation; almost all the trunk and limbs being carried off in the digestive organs of the tiger, leaving only the "melon-like head" of the thief to the owners of the melon patch in exchange for the many similar-shaped fruits the pilferer had stolen on previous

ROYAL PRETENDERS.

A GROUP OF CROWNLESS KINGS.

though many persons think it died on the scaffold with Charles I, still shows an extraordinary vitality. It is an important article in the creed of the great mass of the Russians who believe implicitly In the White Czar. It is commonly held in Germany and Austria, though the Protestants of the empire would not probably confess it. Nothing can shake the confidence of the Hapsburgs in their divine mission, and the belief is shared by a large proportion of their subjects. The idea is less strong in Italy and Spain, except that the followers of Don Carlos, rigid and fanatic Catholics, still make it the motive of his claim to the crown, which the representatives of his branch of the royal family have maintained for the last fifty years. In France the principle is upheld by the Count of Paris, who represents the younger branch of the Bourbons. He is in exile, but his followers fight his cause with energy and ten city. The Bonapartist Pretenders rely less on this supposed right than on a popular attachment to the name of their family, which they are presumed to inherit from the great Bonaparte, its founder. It is the French and Spanish Pretenders who are principally engaged in exploiting the principle. In other monarchical countries the rulers are firmly seated, and there is no need to discuss it.

The name "Pretender" was first used by the English and applied to the banished Stuarts, When James II was obliged by the revolution of 1688 to make his home on the Continent he he was received with favor by the Pope and by Louis XIV, then on the throne of France. He died in 1701, leaving a son, James, called by his Continental friends James III. He was the first Pretender.. He was born in 1688 and died in 766 at Rome, where he received a palace and a pension from the Pope. Such was his faith in the divine right to the English throne that he believed the Continental Powers should place him on it without any exertion of his own. His son, Charles Edward, believed that the divino right should be upheld by force of arms, and in carrying his principles into action he succeeded in making a great deal of trouble and filling a considerable part of the history of his time. He landed in Scotland, raised the Highlanders, had various successes which enabled him to approach within two days' march of London, but was finally defeated at Culloden in 1745. He escaped to the Continent with difficulty. At the request of England he was banished from France, and after various wanderings about Europe he died in Italy in 1788 and was interred at the Vatican, His younger brother, James Edward, diet in 1807. With him disappeared the last of the

Ferdinand VII, who had been confined in prison for seven years by Napoleon, was perimitted to return to power in 1814. His expectations were realized in the person of the child, who afterwards became Queen Isabella Second. When he died he made his wife. Christina of Naples. Regent till Isabelia should arrive at her majority. Don Carlos did not accept this disposition of the crown, and from it resulted the first Carlist war, which began in 1832 and ended in 1839, with the expulsion of the Protender. He returned to France and was permitted to reside at Bourges, but under strict surveillance. In 1847 he was allowed to go to Austria, where he took the name of Count Montemolin. He idled in 1855. He had abdicated in 1844 in favor of his son. His son made several invasions into Spain, the first in 1845, the second in 1849, and the third time in 1860, when he was captured by Queen Isabella's generals, and, to escape from prison, was obliged to sign a formal act of abdication which he did not hesitate to repudiate immediately afterward in behalf of his brother. What passed at the interview was never precisely known, but his estates were restored and he lived thenceforward till his exile in a style of princely magnificence becoming his wishes and expectations. He was afterward appointed Lieutenant-Colonel in the Territorial army, but his title was taken from him several years before his exile, because of the propaganda that he seemed to be making among the officers associated with him. After this his intrigues continued by means of committees who met clandestinely at Paris or at his chateau. These were not unknown to the police, and finally ended in his expulsion. His departure was made with great flourish of trumpets and shedding oftears on the part of his retainers, and was described with minute and touching details by the royalist newspapers. This manifestation was afterward made the subject of a thin brochure; which is distributed from time to time in the provinces to give an idea of the Prince's extraordinary popularity and to prevent his image from fading from the public memory. These proclamations are all conceived in the same letter and spirit. All set forth the troubles that the republic has brought on the country, and promise peace, liberty and prosperity if France will once more place the representative of the younger Bourbons on the throne. The Count of Paris has nothing of the

Bourbon in his appearance. His mother was a Princess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and he has inherited her peculiarities of race and person. He is of the North German, or Flemish, rather than of the French type, a reason, though not a good one, why he fails to excite the enthusiasm of the populace. He has soldierly qualities, and with the other members of his family is personally popular. His means of advertising himself are cheap, and his covert effort to take advantage of the Boulanger movement are unworthy the cause that he professes to espouse. Ask a well-informed Frenchman why Prince

Jerome Bonaparte is called Jerome, and ten to one he will reply: "Because his name is Jerome." This is not true, for his name, as it appears in the "Imperial Almanack" published during the reign of Louis Napoleon, is Napoleon Joseph Charles l'aul. His father, Jerome Bonaparte, during a visit to America married Miss Paterson of Baltimore. The union was annulled by the Emperor Napoleon, who afterward married his pliant nephew to the Princess Catherine of Wurtemberg. The Prince Napoleon had an elder brother, Jerome, who died in 1847, and Jerome is one of the names of Prince Victor. Prince Napoleon is now commonly called Prince Jerome, and sometimes Plon-Plon. Why Jerome, no one appears exactly to know, for European genealogies are complicated and often past find-

Prince Jerome, so called, was born in 1821. He spent all the early part of his life elsewhere than in France. During the reign of his cousin, Louis Napoleon, he enjoyed a certain degree of imperial favor, mingled with a good deal of dissatisfaction at his republican leanings. In 1868-69 he published the correspondence of Napoleon I, and has since given to the public works of less importance, that show cleverness and some literary skill. At one phase of his career he attacked the plebiscite, and expressed the opinion that the only proper manifestation of the public desire was through a parliament. Later he took an entirely opposite ground, that better suiting his purposes. When the question of the Hohenzoll in succession to the throne of Spain came up Louis Napoleon sent him into Italy (he had married the daughter of Victor Emanuel) and into Austria to induce those countries to de clare against Germany. He failed in both instances. When Louis Napoleon was taken prisoner at Sedan, he asked to join him in Germany, but the Emperor declined the honor, upon which he retired to his chateau in Switzerland, whence he was accused of write ing a letter to Bismarck with a view to obtaining the imperial succession. This he denied afterward in a letter to the London Times. Being elected to the Council-General of Corsica some time afterward, the Imperialist members manifested their antipathy by retiring from the Council Chamber when he entered it. He had in Corsica other similar experiences. His public experience besides this was, after the republic began, as Deputy in the Chamber, where he was regarded as a Bonapartist whom it was impossible to classify, and where his utterances were aspally liberal. When the Prince Imperia died he was the natural heir to whatever rights remained in the family, and he has since been so regarded by a majority of the Bonapartists in France, who do not like him personally but feel the need of a legitimate leader. It was his vagaries, in morals as well as politics, that induced Prince Victor to leave him and maintain a separate establishment. The father and son and the parties they represent hate one another bitterly. Prince Victor is not regarded as possessed of a brilliant intellect, but who, for a young man of 28, icads a accordus existence. The time a second son, Louis, a young man past 20, who is serving in the Italian army.--Albert Sutcliffe In'S. F. Chronicle.

SCOTT'S Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil-with Hypophosphites is especially adapted to all conditions where the tissues are wasting away from enability to digest and assimilate ordinary food. The combined virtues of the Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites produce a marked effect in such cases. They restore the wasted tissues, create an appetite, make new blood, heal the inflammation of the throat and lungs, and increase the flesh. In short they form the finest combined food and medicine that can be given the invalid, Any Chemist can supply it.—A.S. Watson & Co. (Ltd.), agents in Hongkong and China. [Advi.
